
Subject: Mango sized - 19 weeks in
Posted by Jamie on Sun, 07 Aug 2011 20:42:18 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I'm 19 weeks and 3 days. 144 more to go.

Nothing really new this week to share - except that I seem to be gaining more weight. My "stretchy" pants (yoga and sweats) that I wear around the house are now not slipping off so easily. They are catching now and again on my belly. I gained a lot of weight this pregnancy, I think mainly because m/s and dizziness hit around the same time that our nasty hot summer weather began killing any chance to get the exercise I intended. Honestly, I've gone walking after midnight on the beach and still am in a sweat, despite the ocean breeze and sunless sky.

My husband recently had a good laugh at me and our grossly overweight and diabetic cat. I give our cat, Ishy, his meds twice a day. Since his brother passed away last week (cancer), he's been a bit difficult in the cooperation department. He's too heavy for me to lift, and tricking him on the bed no longer works. I've resorted to chasing him into a tight spot, sitting on the floor and popping his little pill down his throat. My husband is laughing at the slow-motion fatty race between the two of us, LOL. 'Course he's smart enough not to use the word fatty...but with a smile on my face I have to say that we must look ridiculous.

This week Franklin's singing the ABCs to my stomach at least daily. He's able to locate the baby (who is still not kicking and we have not again felt the baby actually move...we can only locate the "harder" spot sometimes when feeling around.

That's pretty much it for me this week.

Subject: Re: Mango sized - 19 weeks in
Posted by Tamara E on Mon, 08 Aug 2011 15:54:26 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Well, Jamie, I'd say pregnancy is a perfect time to enjoy having a round tummy. ;) :lol: I'm sure you are eating healthfully and it will do both you and your baby good!

Enjoying your updates!
