Hi, all! I need some advice. I had a positive hpt saturday ! I am 51, haven't cycled since last Nov. Had a qualitative blood test today, came back negative. Do any of you have any experience with something like this? Might I be pregnant or did the blood in my urine from the uti cause a false positive? I took two more hpts today, both negative, but my urine was not as concentrated as when I took it on Saturday. Okay, just needing some encouragement! I know with God all things are possible... even at 51!!

Wow, Holly...I am clueless, but praying for you! Keep us posted! The 50's can be a confusing time when it comes to cycles, etc., ;)

With love and hugs,
Tamara

Thanks, Tamara, for your loving reply. After praying, researching and speaking with a midwife, I think I had what is called "blighted ovum". I am encouraged, though, because at least I conceived! Dh and I are still praying. We are hopeful that the Lord will bring us more children, even at our ages! Please keep us in your prayers for a healthy pregnancy next time! We know that with God all things are possible, and that nothing is too hard for the Lord.

Love in Jesus, Holly

A few months ago, my doctor informed me that one of his patients delivered a healthy baby at age 51. Everything is possible with God.
